

A Unique Gift Idea

A gift's purpose is to be pleasing, lasting and visual; at times it can be difficult to find a fresh gift idea. For those with a broad outlook a Persian rug can be an extravagant and valuable asset. "A Persian rug is the perfect memorable gift, a unique work of art which will be cherished by the recipient for many years, and the most versatile piece of furniture in one's home" says Reza Cheshmehdoost - Scotland's leading handmade rug specialist and the owner of Little - Persia.

Persian rugs are now the centerpiece of many Scottish homes. In a traditional house a Persian rug brings warmth and beauty to the living spaces. In a contemporary interior it compliments wooden floors, modern furniture and light fittings.

With their subtly brilliant colours and wonderful designs, handmade Persian rugs add pleasure and joy to people's lives in residential and office surroundings. A quality Persian rug is also a financial asset, because its value increases with age, making each purchase a worthwhile investment.

However, as a result of their popularity, the market is swamped with imitations. For the general public it has become increasingly difficult to distinguish real authentic rugs from the fakes on offer. Furthermore, a rug is less of an investment if initially bought at an excessively high price due to lack of knowledge and experience.

Reza feels passionate about his collection and takes pleasure in sharing his knowledge and experience built up over years of trading handmade rugs; he is offering free information and advice on choosing, caring and cleaning Persian rugs: "I'm always happy to give advice whether it is over the phone, in-store or via email". Acquiring some basic knowledge on the subject helps you to gain a greater appreciation of the wonder and skill involved in the creation of these beautiful treasures. Moreover, it pays to know the right questions to ask and feature to look for when purchasing a handmade rug.
